Describe in Detail

A fixed classroom is one in which students are set up in predetermined groups or set seating arrangements. The arrangements are usually the same with the teacher being the focus of the classroom. A flexible classroom is one in which the students are the focus of the classroom. The new middle school math curriculum is designed to allow students to collaborate with each other. In order to do so, students need to feel comfortable in the classroom. A flexible classroom would let students work in groups and partners. Flexible classrooms have been proven to support students both academically and social emotionally. In academics, it allows them to be more engaged, and focus longer on the material. Social emotionally students feel more comfortable and have more control and choice over what works best for them. The flexible classroom seating can also help support students with sensory issues. This will help students feel more grounded and regulated. It will give their bodies the sensory input they need. Although 6th graders are in Middle School, they still need support and comfort to help them be more successful both academically and social emotionally.
